1 Introduction	1
PART I: Reduced Infinitive Constructions	6
2 Coherence and Restructuring	7
2.1 (Non)finite complementation and transparency	7
2.1.1 The phenomenon	7
2.1.2 Accounting for the phenomenon	11
2.2 Coherence, incoherence, and a “third” construction	14
2.2.1 Two major verb classes	14
2.2.2 Coherence tests	15
2.2.3 Subdivisions in the class of coherent verbs	27
2.3 A typology of (non-)restructuring	35
2.3.1 Four degrees of (non-)restructuring	36
2.3.2 AcI: A hybrid category	40
2.3.3 Restructuring, possessor datives, and binding	42
PART II: The Possessor Dative Construction	45
3 German Possessor Datives: Raised and Affected	46
3.1 Introduction	46

3.1.2	External Possession	46
3.2.1	The dual role of possessor datives	47
3.2	Scope of the chapter	50
3.2.1	Possessor datives	50
3.2.2	Non-possessor datives	53
3.2.3	Solving the classic puzzle	56
3.3	Possessor raising	59
3.3.1	Obligatory possessor interpretation	60
3.3.2	C-command restriction	65
3.3.3	Locality	67
3.3.4	Landau's Possessor raising account	74
3.3.5	Arguments against control and binding	79
3.4	Possessor datives in a framework of dynamic structure-building	86
3.4.1	The facts: Hebrew versus German	87
3.4.2	Possessor datives as both possessed and affected	91
3.4.3	Arguments against a low applicative account	99
3.4.4	Double λ -assignment	107
3.5	Residual issues	117
3.6	Conclusion	125
4	Possessor Datives as Coherence Diagnostic	127
4.1	Scrambling and long passive as diagnostics for infinitival clause size ...	129
4.1.1	Scrambling	130
4.1.2	Long passive	136
4.1.3	Need for a new diagnostic	139
4.2	Possessor datives: A more reliable probe	141
4.2.1	NR predicates	143
4.2.2	RNR and LR predicates	144

4.2.3	FR predicates	154
4.3	Possessor Datives in the context of AcIs	156
4.3.1	Transitive and unergative versus unaccusative AcIs	157
4.3.2	The position of affectee v Ps	159
4.3.3	From possessor datives to binding to phases	164

PART III: Coherence by Phase 166

5	A Phase-based Binding Account of (Non-)complementarity in German	167
5.1	Introduction	168
5.1.1	AcIs: A context for (non-)complementarity	169
5.1.2	Scope of the chapter	172
5.2	Previous accounts	176
5.2.1	Reis 1973, 1976 and Haider 1985	176
5.2.2	Frey 1993	179
5.2.3	Reconsidering the facts	189
5.3	Binding domains and agentivity	198
5.3.1	A phrase-structural analysis of unaccusativity	199
5.3.2	An extension to the nominal domain	205
5.4	Taking the analysis to the next phase	211
5.4.1	Unifying v P and DP	211
5.4.2	Reflexive raising	214
5.4.3	Binding by phase	219
5.4.4	Why PP-embedded reflexives are different	223
5.4.5	PP-phases	226
5.5	Conclusion	234

6	Binding, Possessor Datives, and Phasehood	236
6.1	Parallels between binding and possessor datives as probes for transparency	237
6.2	The phase as the key to opacity effects	245
6.2.1	Agentive versus “verbalizer” vPs	246
6.2.2	Affectee vPs	251
6.2.3	DPs, PPs, and CPs	253
6.2.4	“Double-layer” DPs revisited	256
6.2.5	Beyond coherence: A unified account	262
