(40.D) Thinking back to when you were a student at Swarthmore, what was your view at that time of the workload expectations that faculty members had of students? That is, to be adequately prepared for class, how many hours per week did faculty members expect students to study, read, write, rehearse, and do other activities related to the class (not counting scheduled class time or lab periods)?

In general faculty members expected students to spend:

Very little time outside of class				A great deal of time outside of class
