This First-Year Seminar focuses on the history of Russia from the Revolution of 1197 through the Stalinist purges of the 1930s. Particular attention is paid to assessing the impact of Lenin and Stalin on developments after 1918 and the interplay among socioeconomic, gender, cultural, and ideological currents. We explore the significance of the socialist experiment and try to explain how and why the Stalinist dictatorship emerged. Topics focus on the Bolshevik seizure of power, the cultural dreams of revolutionaries, the struggle to succeed Lenin, the rise of Stalin, the cult of personality, collectivization and industrialization, the purges, and women’s emancipation. Course materials include monographs, documents, memoirs, and films.

The seminar will devote attention to developing your expository and analytical skills as a writer and speaker. We will focus on developing, organizing, revising, and editing your papers and will help you to identify a thesis, develop an argument, and analyze evidence to support your thesis.

All students are expected to read the College's policy on academic integrity and honesty that appears in the Swarthmore College Bulletin. This work you submit must be your own, and you be subject to prosecution by the College Judiciary Committee for work I suspect is plagiarized. When in doubt, check with me.

I also do not accept late papers and will assign a failing grade for the assignment unless you receive my permission to submit the paper after the due date.

You are required to attend all classes, and it is the policy of the History Department that students who do not attend all classes will have their final grade lowered. Indeed, they are at risk for failing the course. In addition, I do not accept late papers and will assign a failing grade for the assignment unless you notify me and receive permission to submit the paper after the due date.
