Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychology

The Department of Psychology announces a tenure-track position at the assistant professor level to begin in the fall semester, 2016. We are seeking an individual who can complement and enrich our current offerings. Applications in all fields of clinical psychology will be considered. Areas of interest include (but are not limited to): clinical psychology and culture, developmental psychopathology, adult clinical psychology, treatment and prevention of psychological difficulties, clinical health psychology, mental health disparities, and clinical neuroscience. We seek an individual with both a strong commitment to teaching and an active research program that can involve bright undergraduates. Teaching responsibilities will include introductory and advanced undergraduate courses in clinical psychology, supervision of student research projects, and possibly courses in introductory psychology and/or research methods.

Swarthmore has a strong institutional commitment to excellence through diversity in its educational program and employment practices and actively seeks and welcomes applications from candidates with exceptional qualifications, particularly those with demonstrable commitments to a more inclusive society and world. We are particularly interested in candidates who can work effectively with students from diverse backgrounds. Applicants from traditionally underrepresented groups are strongly encouraged to apply.

Applicants should submit a brief cover letter describing their interest in applying for this position, statements describing their teaching and research interests, a current CV, and reprints or preprints of recent work. The teaching statement should describe the applicant’s interests in teaching at an undergraduate institution, previous teaching experience, and approach to teaching and mentoring students from diverse backgrounds. The research statement should describe the applicant’s program of research (including research interests, recent and current research, and anticipated areas for future work) and its potential to engage undergraduate students. Relevant experience mentoring students on empirical research should be described in the teaching and/or research statement. Applicants should arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted as well.

Applications and letters should be submitted electronically at https://academicjobsonline.org/ajo/jobs/6318 and addressed to the Clinical Psychology Search Committee, Dept. of Psychology, Swarthmore College. Inquiries may be made to Jane Gillham, Department Chair, at psych@swarthmore.edu. Consideration of candidates will begin October 12.
